Monopoly is a market structure in which a single seller or producer dominates the market, either by being the only provider of a good or service, or by having a high degree of control over the supply of a good or service. Monopolies can be natural, as in the case of a single source of supply, or artificial, as in the case of a patent or a government-granted monopoly. Monopolies are often criticized for their potential to abuse their market power, leading to higher prices and lower quality of goods and services.
