Linguistic prescription, or prescriptive grammar, is the attempt to lay down rules defining preferred or "correct" use of language. These rules may address such linguistic aspects as spelling, pronunciation, vocabulary, syntax, and semantics. Sometimes informed by linguistic purism, such normative practices may suggest that some usages are incorrect, illogical, lack communicative effect, or are ...

Negative words make things mean the opposite. For example: Mr. Morton is not boring. In this sentence the negative word is not. Without the word not, the sentence has exactly the opposite meaning (and is entirely untrue :D). There are lots of negative words in the English language such as not, never, no, nowhere, and nothing. Negative words are an essential feature of our language and there is ...
